By Arman Fatemi: So many people waste their time by surfing the internet. They have lots of tabs opened up on their browser which are just a complete mess! Plus, the one thing that you might hate about tabs is the fact that they always take up a lot of space, and it doesn't look good when you have lots of pages opened up, but you can't access them. That's where Tab Pal comes in. This can help you organize all of your open tabs! About Tab Pal Tab Pal is a user-friendly tab management extension that helps you organize all of the tabs that you have open at the same time. It does this by allowing you to: 1. Keep track of how many tabs you have open 2. Close all of the tabs that you no longer need, or make them into a new tab, so that you can easily open them again. 3. Open new tabs that are right next to your current open tabs. How Does It Work? When you first open it, it will automatically start organizing all of the tabs that you have open, and it will tell you if there are any duplicates. If there are duplicates, Tab Pal will allow you to close them and then it will open the tabs in a different way. If there are no duplicates, it will organize them as shown below: The overview of Tab Pal When you first open Tab Pal, it will be in a "Getting Started" mode, which will explain to you how to manage tabs in the most effective way. These tabs include: – Number of tabs you have open – Total number of tabs you have opened – Count of tabs you have opened and their names – The tabs that are open – Your tabs that are currently opened. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a nonvolatile semiconductor memory device. More particularly, it relates to a structure of a cell array in a nonvolatile semiconductor memory device such as a NAND flash memory.
2. Description of the Related Art Conventionally, in a NAND flash memory, after forming cells in a memory cell array, an opening or hole is formed in an interlayer insulating film (tunnel insulating film) covering the memory cell array, and a connection plug is formed in this hole to connect adjacent cells to each other. By forming such a hole in the interlayer insulating film, it is possible to increase the number of cells which can be formed in a predetermined area of the memory cell array (see Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2007-120515). However, in the structure of a conventional nonvolatile semiconductor memory device, as described above, the connection plug used to connect adjacent cells to each other may be disconnected by the stress applied to the cell array due to an insufficiency of the strength of the interlayer insulating film. The present invention has been developed to solve the above-described problem and an object of the present invention is to provide a nonvolatile semiconductor memory device in which adjacent cells are reliably connected to each other by improving the structure of the connection plug, and the contact resistance between adjacent cells can be reduced.
