Many people who are new to Photoshop use the Quick Start Tour on the Photoshop.com Web site to help them learn how to use the program. In this chapter, we look at the tools in Photoshop. Some are fairly basic and straightforward. Others, like the tools for drawing, are more unusual and often have a bit of a mystique to them. Some tools are there to assist you in aligning layers and correcting images. Others are just plain fun to use, like the good old Brush tool. Still others enable you to create imagery for film and to create fonts and comic books. Getting to Know Your Tools Photoshop has a variety of tools that enable you to control how you make changes to an image. We break down these tools in three categories: Working with raster images: Uses a brush to work on your photo image by using pixels rather than color. Drawing: A tool for drawing vectors rather than raster images. Aligning layers: Captures content from one layer and applies it to another layer without altering the original layer. We go through each of these tools to show you how to use them. Each of these tools is described in greater detail in the next sections. Brushes A brush is one of the most powerful tools in the world, at least when it comes to editing. And by "brushes" we really mean the Brush tool, which is at the top of the Toolbox. The Brush tool is your most important tool when it comes to image editing. Your fingers are the tools you use for a wide variety of other image changes, but the Brush tool is the one that enables you to change an image the most. Like many tools in Photoshop, the Brush tool is a complex tool. However, it enables you to perform some amazing things with a bit of practice. We show you some of the tools of the Brush tool in this section to help you decide whether this tool is the tool for you. Getting familiar with the Brush tool The Brush tool (found under the Toolbox) enables you to make changes to any part of an image. A part of an image can be a part of a raster or vector image. When you use the Brush tool, you are working on raster images. Figure 5-2 shows the Brush tool's menu options. (Some of these options are deselected; others are active.) Notice that you can change the size of your Brush from

* Select the Brush tool from the Brush panel. * Click the photo to bring the Brush tool into the work area and then click and drag a brush tool over the area you want to paint on. * Press and hold the Shift key to access a selection tool. * Click the image to select a portion of the image to paint. * Click and drag over the area you want to paint to define the area. * Press the Delete key or click the Paint Bucket icon to fill the Brush tool with the color of your choice. * Click the Brush tool again to close the Brush panel. * The Brush tool works in the same way as a Stamp tool. You can use the Clone Stamp tool to create new areas of the photo. * You can also use the Brush tool to apply a graphic effect. For example, you can apply a gradient, noise, or make a picture "pop." Blending Modes When working on the image, you may encounter problems with setting the Blending Mode to Overlay, Multiply, Screen, Color Burn, Darken, Lighten, Color Dodge, Hard Light, Soft Light, Difference, and Difference. For example, adding details to a photo can cause the photo to become more overexposed. Over exposure can be avoided by setting the Blending Mode to Screen. Blending Modes control how the work image is combined with the background. This is accomplished by adding a layer mask to the layer. As with all layers, you can turn off or hide the layer mask for later use. Working with layer masks You can turn a layer with a mask off (hide) or on (reveal) by clicking on the mask button. You can also determine the Blending Mode for the layer by clicking the button. A mask can be turned on or off, but it cannot be changed, and the layer can only be changed with the layer mask still on. Adding Layer Masks To create a layer mask, follow these steps: 1. Select the layer containing the work that you want to mask by clicking on it. 2. Click the Layer Mask button at the bottom of the Layers palette window. Alternatively, right-click on the layer and select Layer Mask from the context menu. 3. In the Layer Mask window, you can either enter a number into the Opacity field or click on the plus or minus
