Youth Employment in the UAE With an active youth population of 23 million people in the UAE, one of the fastest growing economies in the world, UAE is playing an important role in the global employment landscape. The UAE is also a global hub for business and trade between China and the West. The UAE is currently undergoing a three-year project on youth employment which offers possible solutions to a number of issues which threaten the long-term economic stability of the country. The project launched in April this year and is expected to be completed in 2019. What is it, and how does it work? The project is focused on creating a new solution to youth employment with the aim of identifying the core challenges faced by young people in the UAE, to find solutions through an initial scoping study and a review of existing studies. This holistic approach aims to distinguish between processes within education and training and employment as well as the effective utilisation of the talent pool that the country has to offer. The main aims of the project are to: define the future skills needs for a competitive economy where future jobs are more and more based on information and software understand where training and skills development are being delivered by institutions and personnel, so that these can be integrated with local business and industry needs and priorities understand the barriers to and potential for getting young people in work through improving the quality of education and training, increasing educational and employment choices and improving the employability of graduates. How will it help? This project is currently in its second phase and consists of a range of activities, including presentations by experts during international workshops in the USA and Gulf Countries. It also includes a review of primary and secondary school education programmes, a review of educational and business development strategies, a review of university strategies, a high-level workshop for senior executives and findings from fact finding visits to companies, associations, government bodies, schools
