views:104210 How did I get into working on drones? Well, my college thesis was on sonar as it applies to ice detection. During the last two years of that study, I was required to build and fly various ultrasonic transducers for testing and I must say, I enjoyed it! I enjoyed building the ultrasonic transducers and flying them with my friends.

Unfortunately, I thought it was finished when I started my PhD research on sonar for ice detection. I was wrong. After the first four months, they brought in some "coders" to help make sure I had coded the system correctly. And then I began to learn how to code the firmware to help with the processing power that goes into the detection system. That's how I got into it. Now I've moved on to a new job in the industry! Check out my channel for vlogs, tutorials and new projects: published:16 Oct 2016 views:155483 Product! A quick video on how to install the product on an AR Drone in addition to a Q&A section. Which one should I get? How big is the difference in size? Can I fly the two of them in the same room? Do they work with Skydio's Rift? Is there any technical difference in each? In my opinion, the Arcadis4/Atlas2 is more user-friendly and has a lower price. It's also got additional mounting options. For those looking to place a drone or UAV on a shelf and out of a major city, the Arcadis4/Atlas2 may be the best option. Q&A: 15 Questions or answers with Robin. 1. Is a mechanical fuse included? A. I looked but did not find one in the package. If you want to use it, you can get one from SparkFun or here: 1. What are best practice limitations to keep in mind

The two notes below sum up the strength of the system, and are unaffected by the rapid inflation of the currency. Improved Diffusion Coefficients by Using Assisted Spin-Direction Correlation Spectroscopy to Study Freely Diffusing Particles. In the current work, we apply the concept of the response operator to developing an analytical method for assessing diffusive properties of single particles, with the main target being quantification of heavy inertial particles. We demonstrate the potential of this method by measuring the quantity, diffusion index, and mobilities of silicon-29, 99, and 199 isotopes. We employ high-efficient spin-direction correlation spectroscopy to measure direct trajectories of heavy particles, and develop a model-independent method that requires only the measurements of single particle mean square displacements and their autocorrelation functions. By applying the response operator, the physical properties, such as diffusion index and mobilities, can be acquired from only these measurements.
