I'm a web developer and I had problems with the IE settings for a website I developed. I solved the problem by requesting a full reset from my hosting provider, and I noticed that their DNS settings also got reset. I thought my problem was solved, but when I started developing the website again, I received the same error that I experienced before. I thought maybe I needed a special flag to IE to indicate to IE that it needs to do the full reset, but searching the Internet, I found no such thing. That's why I'm here, to ask for help. I really want to solve this problem. Reset IPv6 on a dns server (cPanel) free I had a major issue with cPanel yesterday and I am posting this problem here so that someone may help me or provide me with a link to a forum where I can get help for this problem. I ran the scripts to begin the fix today. I have no more issues with cPanel. I have a 300MB download so it may take a long time to finish. I have very limited access to the Internet so when it finishes, I may be out of here for a couple of days. I will update when I am back on, if anything else comes up. The server crashed today and when I started it again, I had a ton of problems. Among the problems that I had were a high CPU usage, and the following error in the log when I tried to enable modules: PHP Warning: ini_set(): The specified.ini file does not exist - cpanel/includes/php/ini.php on line 57 I have no idea where to go from here. I have all my files backed up. I have no access to the CP to even turn it off. I am accessing the server from a client's website that has FTP access. I did a hard reboot of the server and have installed a fresh copy of Drupal. I have made a few progress in fixing the issues by re-generating the menu and content and even a few other things. I am just not able to enable any modules. The progress that I made with my menu creation can be seen below. I want to enable the Live Search Module and when
