Peter Shumlin will lay out his spending blueprint for the upcoming legislative session Wednesday at the state Capitol. "I will present my budget plan for 2015, which will be the first of several we will make over the course of the 2015 legislative session," Shumlin said. "It's going to be different every year, and that's one of the things I've found most exciting about my job." Shumlin said he wants to address income inequality with his spending plan. "What we've seen is that an economy based on more inequality means a lower quality of life for all of our citizens," he said. "The fact is that the wealthiest 1 percent of families in America now have more wealth than the bottom 95 percent combined." Shumlin said he hopes to pass a bill that will close a gap that has opened up between lower-income workers and the wealthy. "I believe that if we are all more equal, we will all have more chance at a better life, and that is what I seek to accomplish
