i love this kind of music. it's just the music i have listened to my whole life and i never got tired of it. it's the first house i've ever listened to, and it's great. i have mostly listened to house music but this is a totally different taste, and i love it. theres actually a lot of good stuff out there that i like - donna summer, the backstreet boys, david bowie, iron maiden, depeche mode.. a whole bunch. but you know, theres also a lot of more poppy stuff from about the late 80s and early 90s that i hate. just the sound of it. stuff like rem and journey and things. i cant believe that so many of my peers are stuck in this dark age and are so down on music. i dont understand why they dont get into stuff like the crystal method or gabriel & dresden or joy orbison or carmelle simpson. to me, stuff like that is the real 80s - everything with synth drums, super bouncy stuff, cheesy but catchy vocals, loads of percussion, and funky, fun bass lines. its no surprise. people who dont like electronic music tend to hate the 80s, and it may be that they like the 80s. but theres a lot of really good music out there. i know people who love the depeche mode record black celebration and i dont know why. personally, i just like music that i like. and i like a lot of stuff from the 80s, or at least i like stuff from the 1980s. i love disco, i love house, i love trance, i like the tekno music of detroit. ive heard a lot of garbage from the 70s, a lot from the 80s and only very little from the 90s. its probably better to remember the 80s as the time when music became popular (and the biggest hair metal ever) than the time of disco and rap.

The BIGGEST 80s Disco Dance Music (Vol 1-32) the tr-606 was part of the group that inspired the 808 with a delay that really launched bass, and the tr-606 sometimes gets a bad rap for being old-school and not very viable now. i really love it, and its simplicity and power. it's basically a mono synth, so no key tracking, just a straight amp inside the synth. and there's a really weird thing about it. when i turn it on, it does a click, and then the initial part of the tune will be like for 1/2 a second or so. i have to turn the knob back to zero to reset it, and then it runs smooth. but i still get some of the clicks with the tune, so its like its getting ready to work. all synthesizers do this because it's mechanical and it sounds perfect, but it always freaks me out. also, you can use the other two controls on the side, the high pass filter and the low pass filter, to change the pitch of the filter of the synth. it sounds nice and i dont have too many problems with it because i get used to it. whether you like this era or not, almost everybody remembers these songs, their choruses, their names and a handful of phrases, miaows, and outros. if you play disco like house, you can recreate this instantly. paul mccartney is overrated chords 90s alternative 80s pop. the music was a combination of his distinctive style mixed with synthesizers and techno beats, which gave it a unique sound that was both catchy and dark. the time is different in the chorus. the time in the chorus is also different in different places. used to be a lot of time in the chorus in the 80s in the first time. but now it changed. the chord progression is the same for the verses, that are the same as the chorus too except the way it is played. my suggestion is to speed up the music and play this chord progression a couple of times. you can play this chord progression and there are other ones. i love listening to this song, check it out. 5ec8ef588b
