as with other ivi devices, the rps operating system can be used to develop applications for the raspberry pi (as in raspberry pi 3). the rps is based on the linux kernel. it boots directly from nvram and can run applications as well as read and write data directly from and to storage. this release provides drivers for the nvm storage that is built into all variants of the raspberry pi. the portable version of energia is a portable version of efs for linux 2.6+. based on the bsd security model, it implements both kerberos 5 and gssapi authentication. the efs was originally a proprietary system, from international business machines corporation (ibm), and later became "the ibm file system." the openhantek data collection system is a free, light-weight, and easy-to-use system for the control of high-resolution data acquisition. the sample rate of the acquisition is limited to 1khz to minimize drift. the openhantek data collection system has been used in a variety of fields, from electro-optics to acoustics to chemical. the latest version, openhantek data collection system is based on linux-based operating system. pc express (pce) is a common standard of the peripheral component interconnect, is a specification for a high-speed bus interface developed by intel to work with the pci bus architecture. it is specified in detail in intel® pc express base specification. this release provides the initial version of the rbepsos assembler tool. the rbepsos assembler should be able to assemble the rbepsos architecture from bootloader (.trc) files. the assembler understands the syntax of the bootloader's input file and writes the assembler output to the bootloader's output file. the syntax of the bootloader's input file is the same as the instructions provided by the documentation at link. 5ec8ef588b
